Charles Shepherd

Charlie first realised that geopolitics held an interest for him when the Scottish Independence Referendum took place in 2014. He is particularly keen to find out more about the causes and resolution of geopolitical conflicts in his further studies.

Charlie's growing interest in Human Geography, and its place in politics, led Charlie to enter the school essay competition on this topic. Charlie also became involved in the Model UN, representing Turkey in an MUN conference.

Community involvement has always been important to Charlie, he has progressed through the ranks of St John's Ambulance and has co-led his local Beaver unit. He developed his leadership skills at Canford by undertaking the Gold DofE award and training with Bournemouth Lifeguard Corps to gain his Beach Lifeguard Qualification. His love of watersports also saw him involved in swimming and on the Stour rowing with the Boat Club senior squad.

Charlie gained A Levels in Biology, Geography and Politics and is now reading Politics and International Relations at Durham University.
